What is Swift Island?

Since 1989 Apple hosts the Worldwide Developers Conference or WWDC in short. A conference where Apple reveals its new technology and products, beta's become public and developers are showcased. For us Apple developers a technological Walhalla.

However not all of us have the luxury to travel to Silicon Valley. We are sitting at home watching the live-stream. That's great, but doesn't give you hands on experience with the API's. When you're stuck, you're probably on your own, as no one before you has experienced the same trouble with the API.

But not this year.
This year will be different.

This year we rented an actual Island. (Ok maybe not the whole Island, but at least part of it.)

How does it work?

A month after the WWDC our mentors have ploughed through all the new SDKs and Frameworks Apple released and created accompanying workshops.

At Swift Island we create the time and space for attendees to come together and solve programming problems and absorb information. Attendees will pair program with the person next to them to gain hands-on experience.

Be part of it.

Your company can be part of Swift Island.

With a line-up of industry experts covering a broad range of topics, Swift Island isn't only a place to participate in workshops but also to interact with attendees, network with the best in the industry, get new business, engage in meaningful conversations and get insight into what the developer community is moving towards.

We are really proud of our line-up:

Daniel Steinberg
Meghan Kane
Roy Marmelstein
Kate Castellano
Manu Rink
Donny Wals
Marijn Schilling
David Hart

As you can see the gender split among our mentors is 50/50. We think this is noteworthy and hope to see this reflected in our attendees as well!

Why should I sponsor?

Because conferences are very passive and after a couple of weeks all the gained knowledge is gone.

Swift Island is a new type of conference.
An optimal learning experience.
Two days of intensive training.
Eight two-hour workshops mentored by the best Apple developers in the industry.

On an Island, surrounded by nature.
And seals. Actual real life seals.
The fluffy kind, not the military kind.
